

Disinterested or uninterested?

15 de diciembre de 2021

Many mortals (including the English, of course) are confused by these words.

Many moons ago (hace muchas lunas) the definitions or meanings of these words were the opposite to the meaning today.

So, if you have been befuddled (click here to check the word "befuddled"), it is understandable.

Here are the meanings in use today.

First, disinterested. If you are disinterested (imparcial, or "impartial" in English) you are not biased. Perhaps you have an open mind, without prejudices (prejuicios).

Now, uninterested. If I am uninterested (no interesado) in something or someone, then I am not interested in the subject or person.