

Have you ever been befuddled?

29 de junio de 2021

Probably. To “be befuddled” is to be confused or perplexed (perplejo). The base verb is befuddle and the adjective is befuddled.

Examine these:

- I am befuddled (estoy confundido) by the new Covid 19 rules.
- Mr. Sanchez is trying to befuddle and distract us from the big problems in Spain (...está intentando confundirnos y distraernos de los...).
- Podemos, the political party in Spain, is in a befuddled state (...estado mental de confusión).
- Taxes in Spain befuddle me.

So have you ever been befuddled? Or have you befuddled someone?
