

Traduce?

17 de noviembre de 2020

For Spanish speakers “traduce” is a third person singular verb: In English “traduce” has nothing to do with translate.

If a person “traduces” (difama) someone, he speaks or writes in a very critical way that harms a person’s reputation. Other similar words are slander (calumniar), defame (difamar). If you “speak ill of someone” (hablar mal de alguien) you are traducing that person.

Study these examples:

- The newspaper article traduces the Prime Minister. (...difama al Primer Ministerio).
- Mr. Casado, the PP leader, has been traduced in the Venezuelan press (...ha sido difamado por la prensa venezolana).
- Mr. Sanchez is traducing (difamando) Mr. Casado in a newspaper article.

Someone who traduces someone is a “traducer”, using traducible words. That action is a “traducement” (calumnia).
